U.S. expats lament tone of election coverage

Republicans and Democrats watching the American election in Canada lamented Tuesday about the reality TV tone the election took on.

"In some ways it's like a big reality show," said Kelli Wight, a member of the Republican's Abroad branch in Toronto who moved to Canada with her husband in 1988. "It's like they're watching X Factor. There's lots of coverage. There's substance to the discussion, but also a lot of sizzle. You're not just looking at two different platforms, but what their recreation interests are."

Wight said she thinks most Americans are voting with their gut feeling. "Unfortunately, they're making a big decision. They haven't read the policies, they don't know the candidates' biographies."

Ex-Philadelphian Joe L'Erario, who settled in Ottawa in the past decade, said he voted just last week on a return visit to the city of brotherly love. He said living between Canada and the U.S. has taught him Canadians are interested in U.S. elections because they need to feel comfortable with the president.

"Canadians were embarrassed for the U.S. because of George Bush Jr.," he said. "Being the way they are, they like to have somebody down below who they can rely on. Obama brought back a lot of passion and honesty."

Elections in Canada are a breeze compared to those to the south, Wight and L'Erario agreed. "There's not as much flash around the campaigns. You don't know when they're coming and they don't last very long," Wight said.

No new money for veteran funerals, federal official says

Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Veterans Affairs Eve Adams looks on as Veterans Affairs Minister Steven Blaney places a wreath on the National War Memorial during a ceremony in Ottawa on Tuesday. Support. Steven Blaney repeats government line about 'standing up' for veterans

Veterans Affairs Minister Steven Blaney says the government has no plans to increase funding for a program that provides funeral benefits to veterans.

At a press conference on Tuesday, Blaney told reporters that the federal government will "maintain" funeral benefits for the Last Post Fund, administered through Veterans Affairs.

"Regarding the funeral and burial program, one has to take in consideration that this funeral and burial program has two components. There's indeed a cap to the funeral, but there's no cap to the burial part," said Blaney. "So that means that the family of a fallen can get much more than the initial amount of the funeral cost."

That initial amount is $3,600, as it has been for more than a decade. The Conservative government has been under fire this week after media reports revealed that out of 29,853 requests for funeral and burial benefits, about 67 per cent, or 20,147, were rejected.

Opposition parties criticized the government for spending millions on celebrating a war that took place before Canada was actually a nation while rejecting applications from soldiers' families to help with burial costs.

"We should all agree that impoverished veterans deserve a proper burial service equal to the sacrifice they made for this country," said NDP MP Irene Mathyssen during question period on Tuesday.

"I would like to ask the minister once again, does he believe that every veteran who serves this country deserves a proper and dignified burial service?"

Blaney responded that the government intends to continue to stand up for veterans.

Orléans. Committee suggests tax breaks to stimulate growth in area

Ottawa's finance and economic development committee is recommending the city forgo millions in tax dollars to give Orleans a boost.

At Ottawa City Hall Tuesday, the committee moved a recommendation to approve a "community improvement plan" (CIP) with about $20 million in tax holidays over five years for developers.

The plan offers tax breaks on new developments in Orleans through "tax-increment financing," which economic development staff believe could help stimulate growth in the east end. The end goal of the CIP is to bring 3,000 new jobs to the areas.

"This is a brand new program that the city has never seen," said Saad Bashir, the head of the city's six-person economic development wing, emphasizing that the CIP is a pilot project.

Bashir spent most of the morning meeting on the defensive, responding to pointed questions from councillors.

Perhaps unsurprisingly, the debate occasionally descended into parochialism as councillors wondered why Orleans was chosen over other districts. Knoxdale-Merivale Coun. Keith Egli wondered — at length — as to why Orleans got the nod.

Others felt the CIP gives sections of the city a leg up in attempting to attract business and development.

"We are picking one area, as one of the presenters said, we are trying to pick winners and losers," said Kanata South Coun. Allan Hubley.

"Businesses that are now locating into Kanata ... if they're looking to locate into there now, they will have to look at this and say 'OK, I can get a better incentive if I go to Orleans.' So that's what we've created."

But Hubley said he would look at a recommendation for Kanata to get a CIP should one arise. ALEX BOUTILIER/METRO

The Orleans CIP can "bridge a clear gap and to help our east end where there's been little or no employment growth for the past 20 years."

Alleged breach of parole

OPP hunting two repeat offenders

The OPP want help locating two men wanted on a nationwide warrant.

Michel Hache, 36, and Marcel Lavoie, 37, are wanted by the Repeat Offender Parole Enforcement (ROPE) squad on for allegedly breaching parole.

Lavoie is serving an eight-year sentence for sexual assault with a weapon, forcible confinement, robbery, break-and-enter, and possession of property obtained by crime, police said.

He is five-foot-nine, 188 pounds, with blue eyes and black hair. Police said he also has a tattoo of a skull on his right upper arm, a tattoo of the Grim Reaper on his left forearm, and a tattoo of a wizard on his chest.

Police said he frequents the Ottawa, Kingston and Sudbury areas.

Hache is serving a two-year-and-four month sentence for robbery, possession of property obtained by crime and theft under $5,000.

He is six-foot-one, 200 pounds, with brown eyes and dark hair, and a tattoo of a bulldog on his right upper arm. He is known to frequent the Ottawa-Gatineau area, police said. JOE LOFARO/METRO

City, wildlife group wrong to move beavers: Expert

Lodge complaint. Trapping, killing beavers would have been more humane than relocation, technologist says

GRAHAM LANKTREE
graham.lanktree@metronews.ca

A family of beavers are likely dead after the city relocated them to Morris Island Sept. 5, says a wildlife expert following accusations from a local wildlife group that the city faked a video of the release.

Last Wednesday, the Ottawa-Carleton Wildlife Centre said a video of the release the city sent them didn't show the beavers that had controversially made their home in a storm pond in Stittsville's Paul Lindsay Park.

"They're saying that the beavers in the video are not the same beavers," said Don Barnes, a senior wildlife technologist with Lakehead University. "It's hard to tell. A young beaver at this time of year would be at least 15 inches or so. They do grow quite a bit. Down there you've got lots of food."

The city promised to relocate the beaver mother and her two kits this summer after work crews destroyed their lodge in the park pond on June 29. The city said the beaver's lodge was blocking a storm sewer and causing damage to trees in residents' backyards.

"You're killing the beaver in a long, slow death. It's ludicrous to me. I don't think they consulted an expert," Barnes said. "They would have shaken their head. I'm not a real advocate of live trapping. It might sound cruel, but because of beaver territoriality and the high beaver population, I don't know what other way would work."

Moving the beavers in September would not only leave them open to attack, Barnes said, but would also leave them unprepared for winter since they need to build a lodge insulated with mud and gather enough vegetation for winter.

"It was all done very secretively. Everything was bad about this," said Donna DuBreuil, president of the Ottawa-Carleton Wildlife Centre. "They should have been left in the pond until the spring."

DuBreuil maintains one of the beavers in the video is not a young kit. "It's not possible that it's only eight weeks old," she said. "That's going to continue to be our position."

"The city made one mistake," said Barnes. "They should have let somebody go with them. It's hard for them to say now that they moved three beavers."

Musician goes back to where it all started

Carleton University. Alumni association recognizes YouTube sensation Dave Carroll

ROSANNA HAROUTOUNIAN
ottawa@metronews.ca

Musician and Carleton University grad Dave Carroll says it was a shock to learn he's receiving the school's highest alumni distinction on Wednesday.

"I was really blown away," said Carroll. "But the biggest reason it hits home is that it all started for me at Carleton."

Carroll says he bought his first guitar when he was a 20-year-old undergrad. He says he and his brother, Don, would play music in the university's underground tunnels when it was too late to practise in their residence rooms.

"I loved the experience of being at a university like Carleton," said Carroll.

He says his first experience as a live concert performer was at Bree's Inn, a small residence pub. He would go on to play at other Ottawa pubs before he and his brother formed the band Sons of Maxwell.

"When I developed a passion in music, I also developed a belief in myself that if I keep plugging away, good things will happen," said Carroll.

Even in bad times, Carroll made good things happen. When his guitar was damaged on a United Airlines flight in 2009, Carroll made a music video about the poor customer service he received. The video, United Breaks Guitars, became one of Time magazine's top 10 YouTube videos that year.

"That cost $150 to make, and I've reached over 150 million people, not just with my music but with my story, and that's what social media can do," said Carroll. "Sharing your story is infinitely more powerful than selling your music."

Real estate. Broker fined and suspended for obstruction

An Ottawa real-estate broker has been fined and suspended after pleading guilty to six counts of obstructing a Real Estate Council of Ontario (RECO) inspector during a 2011 investigation.

RECO says Marnie Bennett of Bennett Property Shop Realty was fined $165,000 and handed a $41,250 victim-surcharge fee by the court. As a result, she cannot practise real estate for four months.

The council began an investigation after allegations were made that she hired non-registered individuals to trade in real estate, contrary to the Real Estate and Business Brokers Act, 2002. It was also alleged that she improperly paid registered real-estate professionals, RECO says.

Marnie Bennett CONTRIBUTED

"Court was told that between September and November 2011, Bennett attempted to obstruct RECO's investigation by counselling an employee to make false statements to the inspector and attempting to provide documents that mis-characterize the nature of payments to salespeople working on her team as loans rather than commissions," said RECO in a statement issued Tuesday.

Bennett's office declined to comment, but said a secretary would email a statement instead. Metro has not yet received the statement.

Outrage. Out-of-line comments about rape knock out candidates

JESSICA SMITH
jessica.smith@metronews.ca

Some controversial comments about rape didn't pay off for two Republican Senate candidates.

Both Missouri Republican Todd Akin and Indiana Republican Richard Mourdock failed in their Senate races on Tuesday.

Akin was considered a strong candidate until a controversial interview in August in which he said that women's bodies have ways of avoiding pregnancy in instances of "legitimate rape."

"The female body has ways to try to shut that whole thing down," Akin said at the time.

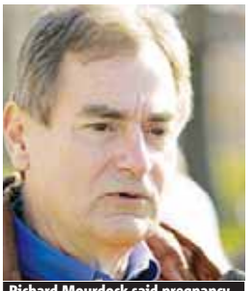
Democratic Sen. Claire McCaskill, who supports abortion rights, was re-elected.

After Akin's controversial comments, Republican leaders, including Mitt Romney, called on him to abandon the race, but he refused.

In Indiana, Democrat Joe Donnelly defeated Republican Richard Mourdock, who had slipped in the polls after saying during a debate that when a woman who is raped becomes pregnant it's what "God intended."

"I, too, certainly stand for life," Mourdock said in the October debate.

"I know that there are some who disagree, and I respect their point of view, but I believe that life begins at conception. The only exception I have to have an abortion is in that case of the life of the mother.



Richard Mourdock said pregnancy after rape is what God intended. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"I struggled with it myself for a long time but I came to realize that life is a gift from God, and I think that even when life begins in that horrible situation of rape that it is something God intended to happen."

The Indiana seat had been held for six six-year terms by Sen. Richard Lugar, whom Mourdock defeated in the primary.

Donnelly's win handed it to the Democratic Party.

Obama does it!

Race for the White House. The lead switches agonisingly all night but U.S. president finally triumphs in historic election

Quoted

"I feel like we put it all on the field. We left nothing in the locker-room. We fought to the very end."

Mitt Romney,
speaking to reporters on his plane as he flew to Boston on Tuesday.

He'll finish what he started.

U.S. President Barack Obama, who sought four more years to get the job done, won the White House in a gut-wrenching, intensely tight battle Tuesday night.

And it was the economy, stupid.

Voters across America chose him as the man who'll best fix the nation's troubled financial state and its high unemployment.

In one of the hardest-fought campaigns in recent history, challenger Mitt Romney, the 65-year-old former Massachusetts governor, battled until the bitter end.

All night the lead kept switching back and forth.

Obama won the reliably Democratic Northeast, and Romney secured his conservative base.

But the critical battlegrounds with the key to victory were unsettled late into the night — Virginia, Ohio and Florida among them — and, astonishingly, some voters were still waiting in long lines late Tuesday.

Romney also held an early electoral vote advantage, 159-147, with 270 needed for victory — although he lost his home state of Michigan as well as Massachusetts, where he served as governor.

All night the lead kept switching back and forth.

Obama won the reliably Democratic Northeast, and Romney secured his conservative base.

The high turnout of African-American voters in Pennsylvania — reportedly even higher than it was in 2008 — was thought to have played a critical role in the president's victory there.

In Chicago, Obama's supporters were overjoyed even though he was yet to officially win the White House.

The president was on his way, along with his wife, Michelle, to address the crowd at his downtown headquarters in the Windy City.

At home in Chicago, the president all but claimed victory. "This happened because of you. Thank you" he tweeted to supporters.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper watched the results in his hotel room in New Delhi, where he is on a visit to India.

Glitches couldn't block democracy's path

It wasn't exactly mayhem, But sporadic problems were reported at polling places around the United States.

A confrontation broke out in Pennsylvania involving Republican inspectors over access to some polls.

Also in Pennsylvania, a voting machine lit up for Mitt Romney even when a voter pressed the button for President Barack Obama.

Video of what an official called a "momentary glitch" was widely viewed on YouTube.

One Florida elections office mistakenly told voters in robocalls that the election was on Wednesday.

In Philadelphia, a judge ordered a mural of Obama covered up after a Republican election worker snapped a picture of it at a school polling place.

There were reported problems with ballot scanners in the Ohio cities of Cleveland, Dayton and Toledo.

Polling places opened late in minority neighbourhoods in Galveston, Texas.

Voters in several storm-ravaged areas in New York and New Jersey expressed relief at being able to vote at all, considering the devastation from Superstorm Sandy.

"Nothing is more important than voting. What is the connection between voting and this?" said Alex Shamis, a resident of hard-hit Staten Island, pointing to his mud-filled home.

Western U. Researchers 'very happy' with HIV/AIDS vaccine progress

Dr. Chil-Yong Kang is one step closer to eradicating HIV-AIDS.

After a successful first trial of a preventive HIV/AIDS vaccine, researchers are predicting there could be a vaccine available in five years — provided phases 2 and 3 are successful.

"Today, I am very happy to announce there were no adverse affects observed during the preliminary Phase 1 clinical trials," Kang said at a University of Western Ontario news conference Tuesday.

Developed by Kang and his team at Western, and supported by Sumagen Canada, the vaccine entered Phase 1 testing in the United States earlier this year. During this phase, the vaccine was administered to 24 HIV/AIDS-positive patients who were monitored for any side effects.

"These tests prove the safety and efficacy of the vaccine," said Dr. Dong Joon Kim, vice-chairman of Sumagen Canada.

Indian government warns Harper of Sikh extremism

Urging vigilance. Prime ministers talk terrorism, nuclear energy during stop on six-day trade trip

The Indian government issued a pointed and public warning to Prime Minister Stephen Harper to mind what they see as alarming evidence of Sikh extremism on Canadian soil.

Harper is usually the one to urge vigilance over extremism and terrorism as he travels the world meeting with his counterparts, but on Tuesday the shoe was on the other foot during a meeting in India's capital with India's minister of state for external affairs Preneet Kaur.

"Prime minister, there was another area of great concern for us, which was the revival of anti-India rhetoric in Canada, and I am from the state of Punjab, which we are very happy you will be visiting," Kaur said during a morning meeting.

"We have after very hard times got a good situation of peace and progress back in Punjab and in India and we would like that to continue.... We do appreciate very much that you have been forthright and open about your stand on this."

Indian Prime Minister Manmohan Singh touched on the issue again during an evening ceremony.

"India and Canada are nations built on shared values that celebrate democracy, inclusiveness and diversity," said Singh. "We have similar concerns in combating terrorism, extremism and radicalism."

The issue of internal extremism has been one that has shaken India to the core over the past several decades — former prime minister Indira Gandhi was murdered by her own Sikh bodyguards after a string of events sparked by fundamentalists seeking their own separate, fundamentalist nation they would call Khalistan.

Gunmen assassinate brother of leading Syrian politician

Risk of 'Somalization'. UN-Arab League envoy Lakhdar Brahimi says crisis could lead to fall of the state, rise of warlords and militias

Gunmen killed the brother of Syria's parliament speaker in a hail of bullets as he drove to work in Damascus on Tuesday, the state news agency said.

Mohammed Osama Laham, the brother of Parliament Speaker Jihad Laham, became the latest victim of a wave of assassinations targeting Syrian officials, army officers and other prominent supporters of President Bashar Assad's regime. The killing came a day after some of the most intense fighting in Damascus in months as rebels wage a civil war to unseat Assad.

The government and activists said a series of explosions Tuesday evening rocked the northwestern edge of Damascus. At least 13 people were killed and 30 wounded. Activists said the bombs were placed in a main square near housing for the country's elite troops from the Republican Guards, which is led by Assad's brother, Maher, in charge of protecting the capital.

Meanwhile, British Prime Minister David Cameron suggested Tuesday that Assad could be allowed safe passage out of the country if that option would guarantee an end to the nation's civil war.

The Turkish state news agency reported that seven Syrian generals defected to Turkey, joining dozens of other generals who have abandoned the regime.

In Jordan, visiting Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov met with Riad Hijab, the former Syrian prime minister who defected to Jordan in August. It was a rare, high-level contact between Moscow and a Syrian opposition figure. Lavrov said his talks with Hijab were meant to get firsthand information from the Syrian opposition on how they view a solution to the civil war. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Not so scary after all: Why rookies shouldn't fear stocks

Investing. This is the first of three columns on getting into the stock market

IN THE MARKET
Bryan Borzykowski
For Metro

If you're hoarding cash rather than investing it, you're losing money, says columnist Bryan Borzykowski. In the first of a three-part series, he aims to convince investing newbies that equities aren't so frightening. ISTOCK

For most of the last century, investing in the stock market has been a great way to make money. That's because share prices have mostly gone up.

Of course, someone who lost their retirement savings during the recession doesn't want to hear that. While the markets have mostly recovered since the economic crisis, many people still want nothing to do with equities.

These days, most people are keeping their money in bonds, high-interest savings accounts or under a mattress, which is precisely where you don't want your cash to be. Investments must grow faster than inflation or you end up losing money. Right now, inflation is around two per cent, while a 10-year Government of Canada bond is paying 1.8 per cent. You get nothing for storing your money on a shelf at home.

Despite what you saw in the crisis, the stock market isn't a scary place. There are plenty of low-risk places for conservative investors to stash some dough, such as in brand-name, dividend-paying stocks. While it's true that equities will always be riskier than bonds, in today's low-interest-rate environment, barely paying fixed-income has become risky too.

The beauty of the stock market is that anyone can buy in, even if you only have $20 a month to save. Banks will take just about anyone at any income level; some larger firms require a $500,000 investment or more before they'll take a client on. While you can get access to different investment options — such as real estate or hedge funds — if you have more money, the point is that you don't need to be rich to invest.

You also don't need to know much about the markets. Investing newbies can purchase mutual funds — securities that hold a basket of stocks — through an adviser. Savvier investors may buy stocks online. The earlier you start the better, though. The longer your funds are left to grow, the more money you'll make.

The only people who should stay away from the markets are those who can't stomach any risk at all. Even the most conservative equity investors will see their portfolios fall from time to time. If you can't fathom seeing a negative number, then maybe the mattress is right for you.

As history has proven time and time again, though, markets do rise. It may take a while before the volatility we're experiencing today dies down, but it will. Either get in now, when stocks are cheap, or hope that wad of cash you're hoarding somehow finds a way to reproduce.

Role models

Investors to watch

Follow the advice of these famous investors and watch your returns rise:

Warren Buffett The Oracle of Omaha got rich by buying undervalued companies. It's called value investing. You buy a business that no one wants, which makes it cheap. When people eventually buy in, the stock price soars.

Peter Lynch This famous investor perfected the Growth at a Reasonable Price approach. He wants undervalued companies that are also growing earnings. Find a value stock that's growing and you've got yourself a winner.

Prem Watsa The CEO of Toronto's Fairfax Financial has been called the Canadian Warren Buffet. He's also made his millions buying undervalued companies. Like any good investor, he's focused on long-term returns, not short-term gains.

Lack of transparency kills budget-watchdog report

Federal standoff.
Kevin Page says he will have an opinion this month on whether he can sue Ottawa for needed information

Canada's budget watchdog will not issue a mid-year report on the Harper government's finances, citing lack of co-operation from the vast majority of departments.

Parliamentary Budget Officer Kevin Page posted a partial analysis on the government's $5.2-billion spending cuts plan Tuesday, but said a complete report that would be useful to parliamentarians is impossible because he just hasn't been given enough information.

He is seeking legal advice on whether he can sue Ottawa for the information, saying he will have an opinion this month.

"We're just saying show us the plan. This is not just a PBO issue, Parliament needs to see this and if they do see it and start to scrutinize these plans, the chance of hitting objectives goes up," he said.

"But to say 'We are not giving you the plan' totally undermines Parliament."

Page said he has been begging departments and other governmental organizations to report to his office their plans for personnel cuts and their impact on programs and services for seven months, but in many cases has received only a perfunctory response.

To date, the PBO has received responses to requests about budget cutbacks from 91 per cent of government departments. However, most have supplied inadequate information, he said.

Only one-quarter of departments, representing three per cent of the $5.2 billion in budgeted cutbacks, have provided data on personnel losses or the impact on services to Canadians, he said.

"The lack of disclosure will prevent the PBO from providing parliamentarians with independent analysis on the state of the nation's finances and the estimates of the government," the budget officer said in the analysis.

On Monday, Finance Minister Jim Flaherty reiterated his position that he does not believe Page is entitled to the information he is seeking.

Kytephone

Canadian app gets high-profile competition

Last week, Microsoft unveiled its new mobile operating system Windows Phone 8 and a feature called Kids Corner, which must sound like a godsend to parents who let their little ones play with their smartphone.

It allows parents to enable a child-friendly interface that hides apps and phone features that rambunctious tots could cause trouble with.

Kids Corner sounds remarkably similar to the brainchild of Toronto-based Martin Drashkov and Renat Gataullin, co-founders of Kytephone, an app for Google's Android phones and tablets.

Not that they mind. Given that Kids Corner is exclusive to Windows phones — which still represent a very small part of the mobile market — they don't consider it direct competition. Plus, the headlines for Kids Corner probably helped generate a little extra buzz for Kytephone, which has only been out for a few months.

FACT: NICE GUYS FINISH FIRST

JUST SAYIN'
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

There's hope for me yet.

Not just me, but millions of Guys.

Guys: You know who you are. You are impervious to all the recent trends toward humanization. Sensitive New Age Guy? Metrosexual? Fuggedaboutit. Emotions are like kryptonite or cockroaches. They need to be removed from the room to make it safe for football, video games, hot wings and the other essentials of Guy life.

Well, turns out that getting in touch with our feelings is not only trendy, it's also good for us.

Huh? (The universally recognized Guy response to any complex thought.)

A Harvard study that's been going on since 1938 has found that relationships (eeyeww), not genes or birth order or political affiliation, are the best indicator of how well men will do throughout their lives. The Grant Study, as it's known (who heads up Grant's study?) has followed 268 Harvard students through their entire lives.

Emotional long haul

Here's the bottom line, Guys. Of those participants who have the capacity for intimate relationships, one third are still alive. Of those who don't? Four miserable SOBs.

Here's the bottom line, Guys. Of those participants who have the capacity for intimate relationships, one third are still alive. Of those who don't? Four miserable SOBs.

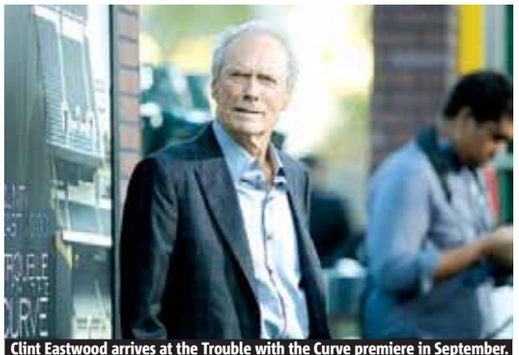
Around our place, it's generally assumed I'll be the last crotchety old coot standing while my dutiful offspring are drawing straws to see who gets to put up with me after the authorities have washed their hands. But if this Grant Study is any indication, they'll have nothing to worry about. I'll die young (well, youngish), the tragic victim of emotional constipation. Like the end of a Clint Eastwood movie.

But wait! It doesn't have to be that way. The researchers have documented what should be called the Ebenezer Scrooge Effect. Somewhere along the line, a few lucky Guys discover their emotions and become interesting.

The New York Times' story on the study features a Guy who worked night shifts to put himself through school, then biked to class first thing in the morning. He probably had to plow his way through seven-foot snowdrifts, too, like the rest of us Guys. By the time he was 40, he was a burnout: "Mediocre and without imagination." Then, in his old age, he went back to his first love, theatre, got married at 78, and, by the time he was 86, got down to a single medication: Viagra. He died at 96 from having too much fun.

The title of the research is called Triumphs of Experience.

What doesn't kill you can make you glad to be here. And ready for someone who wants to share your secret and doesn't care if you start to cry during the part where Clint finally sees the light. Just before he takes the bullet meant for …



Clint Eastwood arrives at the Trouble with the Curve premiere in September. It's a film about an aging baseball scout who takes his daughter on one last recruiting trip. So there's still hope for all you Guys. GETTY IMAGES

Daniel Day-Lewis' portrayal of Abraham Lincoln has him as an early Oscar favourite this year. DAVID JAMES/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Day-Lewis filling big shoes in character and competition

IN FOCUS
Richard Crouse
scene@metronews.ca

Mark S. Reinhart, author of Abraham Lincoln on Screen, claims the 16th President of the United States, "is the most frequently portrayed American historical figure in the history of the film and television arts."

Portrayed more than 300 times on film and TV, Honest Abe has done everything from pardon a sentry who fell asleep on duty in the 1908 short film The Reprieve: An Episode in the Life of Abraham Lincoln, to getting revenge on his assassin in Police Squad to teaming up with Star Trek's Captain Kirk to explain the concepts of good and evil to the aliens of Excalbia. In this weekend's Lincoln, starring Daniel Day-Lewis, the president oversees the passing of the 13th Amendment, guaranteeing freedom for the country's slaves and ending the Civil War. Day-Lewis is a lock for an Oscar nomination, and a favorite to win, but his portrayal stands in the shadow of two movie legends.

Henry Fonda played the title character in Young Mr. Lincoln, a melodramatic and inaccurate chronicle of Abe's formative years.

Wearing specially made boots that made him appear taller, Fonda was honoured to play the president.

"I felt as if I were portraying Christ himself on film," he said.

Canadian-born Raymond Massey played Lincoln multiple times on stage and film.

He was so attached to the character a colleague joked that Massey wouldn't be satisfied with his Lincoln impression until someone assassinated him. For a certain generation, however, Lincoln might be best remembered for a speech that began with, "Fourscore and seven minutes ago…" and ended with, "Party on, dudes!"

But Bill & Ted's Excellent Adventure isn't the only movie to take a light-hearted look at the Great Emancipator.

One of Brendan Fraser's seven wishes in Bedazzled is to be president.

But he soon learns to be careful what he wishes for when he is zapped back into history as Lincoln himself as he watches a play at Ford's Theatre. Abe also gets a laugh in Night at the Museum: Battle of the Smithsonian when the Lincoln Memorial comes to life.

Perhaps the strangest portrayal came earlier this year. Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter is exactly as advertised, leading one critic to call it, "a funny, scary, and cheerworthy adventure that somehow manages to make the 16th President of the United States a bad-ass action hero."

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

I'm voting for:

In honour of the U.S. presidential election, The Word decided to cast a vote for their favourite celebrity causes.

I vote:

… for Amanda Bynes to report to rehab, directly to rehab, do not pass go, do not collect $200.

… for Johnny Depp to buy some eye makeup remover.

… for Britney Spears to keep on hiring whomever she's employing to make her seem sane. They are doing a pretty bang-up job.

… for Beyoncé and Jay-Z to keep breeding.

… for Ashton Kutcher to stop following in the footsteps of Charlie Sheen.

... for more Michael Fassbender — with or without pants on. Where did that guy get to?

… for Christina Aguilera to not feel pressure to go crazy on the elliptical. You look good just the way you are, girl.

...for Matthew McConaughey's ongoing research into ways to reveal his chest on camera.

… for Ryan Reynolds to join Matrimonials Anonymous and admit he really just likes taking part in weddings.

… for Nicole Kidman to burn this dress immediately

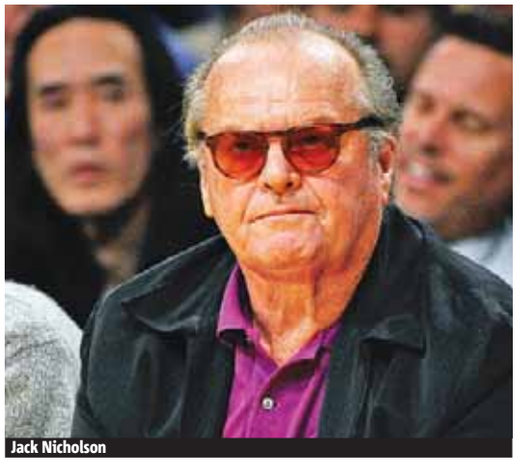
Lindsay Lohan

Lohan could go to jail ... again

One of Lindsay Lohan's recent run-ins with the law is coming back to haunt her — and it could mean jail time.

The troubled actress was involved in a car accident over the summer, and at the time she told the police she had been a passenger in the car and not the driver despite witness accounts to the contrary. Now, the Santa Monica City Attorney is reportedly planning to file the case as a misdemeanor this week, according to TMZ.

And as Lohan is still on probation, a charge of lying to police is enough to send Lohan back to jail, though it likely won't be for very long.



Jack Nicholson

Nicholson: I'm no sex machine

Jack Nicholson isn't a fan of his reputation as a Hollywood Lothario. "I am an extreme person. If someone says, 'Jack, you are a womanizer,' I don't deny it. But the life of a gigolo always ends badly," the 75-year-old Oscar-winner tells the Sun. "That is one of the reasons I feel uncomfortable about all that 'sex legend' stuff." Nicholson also says that reports of his conquests — he's rumored to have bedded more than 2,000 women — are greatly exaggerated.

5 Breaks from Christmas

With the Halloween candy barely eaten and Christmas carols already playing in the mall, you might be thinking of skipping out on the holiday stress. Here are a few ideas for destinations that are mercifully Christmas-free.

EMMA E. FORREST
Metro World News

1 Visit the Muslim Marrakesh, Morocco

Why? This atmospheric, iconic Moroccan city with its pink ramparts feels pretty festive all year round, and Christmas is a non-event here because Morocco is mainly a Muslim country.

How? By day, lose yourself in the warren of the maze-like medina old town, haggle over carpets in the sprawling souk, then unwind in a roasting hammam. By night, tuck into street food for supper from the steaming stalls that are set up every night in the central square, Jemaa el-Fnaa, enjoy a tasting menu in a chic hotel or hang out in one of the glossy nightclubs and cocktail bars in the new town. Head to the souk for leather pouffes, spices and traditional pointed slippers in soft leather in Africa's largest indoor market. visitmorocco.com

2 Health boot camp in Thailand

Why? Instead of piling on the pounds at a family feast, lose them at a Thai detox spa instead.

How? Thailand is a mainly Buddhist country, so you won't see Santa everywhere here, and besides, you'll find it hard to care during your cleanse. On the detox retreat at Samui Spa on the idyllic island of Koh Samui, you'll enjoy daily yoga, too.

3 Change the date for Christmas in Moscow, Russia

Why? The Russian Orthodox Christmas isn't until Jan. 7, so you get two whole weeks in which to give Christmas craziness the slip.

How? If you like your winters white and your cities atmospheric, then Moscow is a top choice. You can skip Christmas here, but you do get the mother of all parties for New Years — when you can see 2013 by fuelling yourself with local vodka and joining the locals as they gather in Red Square to hear the Kremlin's bells peal.

4 Take a silent retreat at Mount Koya, Japan

Why? Tokyo may be lit up like a Christmas tree at this time of year and heaving with shoppers, but you can also go for a deeper and less superficial experience at Mount Koya, Japan.

How? Stay at the ninth century monastery at the top of Mount Koya, two hours from Osaka, and you can trade commercialism for spiritualism. Fifty-three of the 120 temples here in this exquisite woodland wilderness host guests in traditional shukubo lodgings with rice-paper sliding doors, tatami mats and futons; some with private gardens complete with bonsai trees. You'll eat traditional Buddhist vegetarian food and can experience zazen, a type of meditation practiced by the monks here. shukubo.jp/eng

5 Escape to a paradise island, Vietnam

Why? If you're looking to escape the crowds, cold weather and commercialism, escape to the tropical paradise island of Phu Quoc in the Gulf of Thailand.

How? Vietnam's largest island, Phu Quoc, is an undiscovered gem. It's also home to Vietnam's finest fish sauce and an exceptional place to eat fresh seafood. Hole up at luxurious but laidback Chen Sea Resort and Spa on the island's idyllic west coast. Learn how to cook the perfect prawn with their Iron Chef-contestant head chef, who will take you to buy ingredients at the buzzing local market first. centarahotels-resorts.com

Free wheelin' through the streets of Europe

Trend. Cycling has become the hip new way to travel in some of the most congested cities on the continent

What better way to see a city than from a bicycle? PHOTOS: THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Central Station in Amsterdam is a sea of bicycles parked by commuters.

Cycling through the heart of some European cities can be a terrifying experience as you jostle for space with cars, trucks and scooters that whizz by with only inches to spare.

Thankfully for bicycle enthusiasts, a movement is afoot to create more room for cycling in the urban infrastructure.

From London's "cycle superhighways" to popular bike-sharing programs in Paris and Barcelona, growing numbers of European cities are embracing cycling as a safe, clean, healthy, inexpensive and even trendy way to get around town.

The trend is also catching on outside of Europe, says John Pucher, a professor of urban planning at Rutgers University in New Jersey and co-author of a new book titled City Cycling. Pucher says urban cycling is on the rise across the industrialized world, though Europe is still ahead of the pack.

"Americans make only one per cent of their trips by bike compared to 26 per cent in the Netherlands, 18 per cent in Denmark, and eight to 10 per cent in Belgium, Germany, Sweden and Finland," Pucher said, citing official statistics.

But you don't need statistics to realize that cycling is in vogue. Here are two ways the bicycle renaissance has hit the streets of Europe:

Cycle superhighways

They're not anything as spectacular as multiple-lane expressways for cyclists, but city planners believe they're central to the bicycle revolution: They combine bike paths with bike lanes on regular streets to give pedaling commuters a smooth ride from the suburbs to the city centre.

London opened four "cycle superhighways" in 2010, which basically amount to a blue lane for cyclists on the edge of city streets. Copenhagen's approach is more ambitious, seeking to keep bicycles and motor vehicles physically separated as much as possible. The Danish capital plans 26 such routes — the first of which opened this year — building on bicycle-friendly features that have been in place for years.

Stoplights are adjusted to the rhythm of bicycles, not cars. Intersections have foot rests and hand rails so that cyclists don't need to put their foot down when they stop. The route is lined with air-pump stations and trash cans that are tilted for easy access from the saddle.

"A cycle highway is where cyclists get highest priority, with few obstacles and as few stops as possible," said Marie Kaastrup, a Copenhagen city official in charge of bicycle programs.

Bike sharing

Bike sharing or city bike services that offer bicycles for short trips in the downtown area have come a long way since the first large-scale program started in Copenhagen in 1995. That concept was simple: Deposit a coin to release a bicycle from any of a number of bike racks across the city — like unlocking a shopping cart at the supermarket — and get your coin back when you return the bike (not necessarily to the same rack). Less than two decades later, scores of bike-sharing programs have been launched in Europe and beyond. The most recent ones are high-tech, with customers using smart cards or even mobile phones to unlock bikes from docking stations.

Autumn flavours get baked up in Cardamom Cranberry Pear Crisp

Ground cardamom gives this simple fall-friendly crisp a sweet-spicy flavour that you will smell as much as taste. Don't worry too much about which type of oats to use in a recipe such as this. Though old fashioned rolled oats are the best, feel free to use the "quick" variety if that's what you happen to have. The differences won't be tremendous.

1. Heat the oven to 400 F. Coat a 9-by-9-inch pan with cooking spray.

2. To make the topping, in a medium bowl use an electric mixer to beat together the butter and brown sugar until creamy. Add the flour, oats, cinnamon and salt. Stir together until the mixture just forms moistened crumbs and small clumps. Set aside.

3. To make the filling, in a medium bowl, toss together the pears, cranberries, brown sugar, cardamom, salt and cornstarch.

4. Spread the mixture evenly into the prepared pan. Sprinkle the topping evenly over the filling. Bake for about 1 hour, or until the pears are tender and bubbling and the topping is well browned.

Ingredients

Topping
- 1/2 cup (1 stick) butter, room temperature
- 1/2 cup packed brown sugar
- 3/4 cup all-purpose flour

- 1/4 tsp salt

Filling
- 8 pears, peeled, cored and sliced
- 8-oz package frozen or fresh cranberries
- 1/2 cup packed brown sugar

Caramel Apple Pie. A modern take on tradition

1. In a large, deep skillet over medium-high heat, toss the apple slices with the vinegar. Cook until the apples are tender, about 10 minutes.

2. Transfer the apples and any juices in the pan to a large bowl. Set aside.

3. Return the skillet to the heat. Add the caramel candies, half-and-half, apple pie spice and salt. Heat, stirring constantly, until melted and smooth.

4. Pour the caramel mixture over the apples and stir until well coated. Spoon the apple-caramel mixture into the graham cracker crust.

5. Sprinkle the top with the cookies, peanuts and chocolate chips. Serve immediately.

Marzipan carrots complete Carrot & Chocolate Cupcakes

1. In a large bowl and using electric hand mixer, beat butter with all but 15 ml (1 tbsp) of the brown sugar until fluffy. Add egg yolks, vanilla and almond extract; beat again. Stir in carrots. Set aside.

2. In separate bowl, sift flour, cocoa powder, cinnamon, baking soda, baking powder and nutmeg. Fold into butter mixture, alternating with buttermilk, making 3 additions of flour mixture and 2 of buttermilk. Fold in chocolate chips.

3. In a third bowl, beat egg whites until frothy. Beat in remaining 15 ml (1 tbsp) brown sugar until stiff. Gently fold into batter until just blended.

4. Divide among 12 paper-lined muffin cups. Bake in a 190 C (375 F) oven for about 25 minutes or until tops are springy to the touch. Let cool completely on rack.

5. Icing: In a bowl, beat butter, icing sugar and cocoa powder for 1 minute or until fluffy and smooth. Beat in buttermilk and vanilla until smooth. Spread over cooled cupcakes.

6. Decoration: Knead marzipan to soften. Tint with food colouring by combining one part red food colouring to two parts yellow to make orange. Form into 12 small carrot shapes. Roll edge of small knife around each carrot, making light indentations. Make small hole in top of each carrot with toothpick; press fresh carrot greens (leaf) into hole. There are superpowers to gain from your side job

Earn points for part-time. Make the most of what might seem like a pointless pursuit

MICHELLE CIRCOSTA
TalentEgg.ca

One of the biggest challenges students must face is balancing time between short-term and long-term goals.

Many choose to maintain part-time jobs while enrolled in full-time university or college programs. Sometimes that part-time job may not directly align with your long-term career aspirations and often the two are entirely unrelated. It's all a matter of circumstance or preference.

Whatever the reason, rest assured that it is possible to leverage your part-time job in the pursuit of your long sought after goals for the future. The question is how can you get the greatest return out of what may often feel like a seemingly aimless time investment?

Make it relevant

Think about the position you want after graduation. How can the skills you are developing and perfecting help improve your knowledge repertoire?

Take, for example, a part-time retail position in sales. The list of valuable skills is endless: Meeting sales goals, sustaining relationships with customers, training new hires — all of which can translate to a wealth of other positions. But even if your interests do not lie in the corporate world, be innovative, think of ways you can make your part-time position applicable to those goals.

Frame your experience

You are the storyteller and it's up to you to get the person on the other end of the interaction to hear exactly what you want them to know. It's that simple.

Part-time work experience, in whatever field, helps not only to develop valuable skills, but also builds character and demonstrates integrity. According to Amir Khan, client and student advisor at York University's Schulich School of Business, recruiters are interested in the technical skills of a candidate, but they also place emphasis on your soft skills when considering your application.

Not just a job

Part-time retail work is still relevant experience

- Take Robert Rizzo, for example, a director of marketing for a multi-national consumer packaged goods company. When he was a full-time BBA student at Schulich, he also worked as a sales associate at Gap and was extremely well-versed in the art of jean folding.
- Even today, with his wealth of experience and knowledge, should Rizzo find himself in a job interview, referring back to his time at Gap is one of his favourite strategies. "You don't need professional experience to have a platform to showcase what you can accomplish," he says.

Going the extra mile can get you noticed

Let's take a look at someone who took full advantage of the opportunities made available to him by his part-time job. Anthony Saracino was a full-time student enrolled in the fashion communications program at Ryerson University and he graduated with a Bachelor of Design. Saracino worked part-time at Guess as a sales representative while he was in school — a familiar scenario for many students.

The difference with Saracino is that he never lost sight of his long-term goals and was fueled by his passion for the fashion industry. Naturally, this led him to go beyond the stipulations of his job description.

He began putting together the window displays for the Guess location where he worked. His displays were so eye-catching that when Marciano himself was performing store visits, he noticed the displays — and Saracino — and flew him out to work in Los Angeles.

DOCTOR'S ORDERS – SEE A DENTIST

IT'S IMPORTANT TO MAINTAIN GOOD OVERALL HEALTH

CREATAS IMAGES/THINKSTOCK

Oral health, overall health. Try saying that five times fast.

Aside from being a tongue twister, it's convenient that they sound so similar — the two should be forever linked in your mind.

Poor oral health is not just a cosmetic problem. According to the Canadian Dental Association (CDA), growing scientific evidence points to a link between gum disease and a "myriad of health problems such as pneumonia and chronic respiratory disease, heart disease, stroke, and pre-term and low-birth weight babies."

But what do your gums have to do with heart disease or pregnancy?

"This is an area of great research right now in oral health care, in North America and around the world," says Dr. Peter Doig, president-elect of the CDA. "Poor oral health can cause problems with any other health problem that you may have in the body. (This may be) a result of the inflammatory process, and the products that are created within the body as a result of inflammation and infection. The associations have been made — cardiovascular diseases and diabetes are two of the big ones."

As for pre-term or low-birth weight babies, the CDA says it's likely that "toxins enter the bloodstream through inflamed gums separating from the bone," and this has been found to create stress for the fetus.

Oral diseases are startlingly common. Up to 80 per cent of Canadians will be affected by gum disease at some point in their lives, the CDA says — and this disease is the leading cause of tooth loss in Canada. Fortunately, it is both highly preventable and treatable in many cases.

"Gum disease covers a very broad spectrum," Doig says. "It includes things like gingivitis, which can be a very minor oral infection that is very easily treated."

A beautiful smile – the result of a healthy mouth — perhaps doesn't occupy our sense of health consciousness. Until, of course, it's gone.

"Oral health, oral pain, missing teeth and infections influences the way a person speaks, eats and socializes," Doig says. "It may affect their physical, mental and their social well-being. It can reduce a person's quality of life." – Nina Dragicevic

ADDED RISKS

One study found that, among Canadians aged 36 to 69, individuals with a severe gum disease had a three to seven times increased risk of fatal heart disease. Researchers have also found that those with poor oral health may be up to three times more likely to have a stroke.

Federer begins season-ending event in dominant fashion

Fehr optimistic as negotiations resume

Back to the table. League, players attempt to bridge gap in New York on lockout's 52nd day

Quoted

"We're hopeful that we'll start bargaining and we'll continue bargaining until we find a way to make a deal."

NHLPA executive director Donald Fehr ahead of Tuesday's negotiations

The NHL and NHL Players' Association didn't just return to the bargaining table on Tuesday. They stayed there for a good long time.

Talks restarted at an undisclosed location midway through the afternoon and were still ongoing more than five hours later, according to sources.

It was a potentially encouraging sign with the negotiations at a critical juncture and the sides expected to hold another session on Wednesday. The NHL requested that the meetings be held in a private setting because it thought it increased the odds that progress could be made.

Donald Fehr, the NHLPA's executive director, met reporters about 90 minutes before talks resumed and expressed a desire to see the parties start closing in on an agreement.

The sides hadn't held a formal meeting since Oct. 18 in Toronto, when the NHL took about 10 minutes to dismiss three proposals put forward by the union.

Pittsburgh Penguins captain Sidney Crosby was among the players who attended that meeting and he also flew to New York on Tuesday after making a "last minute" decision to sit in on this one.

The biggest issue the sides have to bridge a gap on is the mechanism that would see all existing contracts honoured in full, even after the players' overall share in revenue is reduced to 50 per cent from its current position of 57 per cent. A "make whole" provision in the NHL's Oct. 16 offer attempted to do that, but the NHLPA didn't like that deferred payments would count against the earning potential of future players.

Union concludes Cabrera's agents unaware of Internet scheme

The baseball players' union concluded Melky Cabrera's agents didn't know about a scheme to create a phoney website in a defence of his positive drug test but said they failed to properly manage the employees of the firm who tried to carry out the scheme.

Brothers Sam and Seth Levinson, the heads of ACES Inc., were probed by the Major League Baseball Players Association after MLB's investigations department discovered the attempt to concoct evidence. Cabrera, the all-star game MVP, was suspended 50 games in August after testing positive for testosterone.

Soccer. Longtime coach Fonseca named CSA's technical director

The Canadian Soccer Association has named Tony Fonseca its new technical director.

Fonseca is a longtime staff coach for the association. He has coached Canada's under-20 and under-23 clubs, and most recently has been an assistant coach with the senior squad. The post of technical director has been vacant since Stephen Hart left it to take over as national team coach. He stepped down as coach last month.

The CSA says Fonseca will be responsible for the overall management and direction of the technical growth and development of soccer in Canada.

DRIVE 5

Get ready for the Ram 1500

ALL PHOTOS WHEELBASE

Fuel economy

For fuel-saving measures, a thermal management system rapidly warms engine and transmission fluids, allowing them to function more efficiently, sooner, which also helps save gas. Then there's a stop-start system that shuts off the engine (while still maintaining necessary electric-powered systems) when stationary.

Engine

Chrysler has finally decided to install its 3.6-litre V6 and eight-speed automatic transmission between the Ram's flanks, replacing the 3.7-litre V6. The result is a significant 90-horsepower gain (to 305) and a torque increase to 269 pound-feet from 235. The new powertrain makes a world of difference.

Ram 1500

- Type. Two/Four-door, rear/four-wheel drive.
- Engines (hp); 3.6-litre DOHC V6 (305), 4.7-litre SOHC V8 (310), 5.7-litre OHV V8 (395)
- Transmission. Eight speed auto., six speed auto. (4.7).
- Base price (incl.destination). $28,500

Design

Outwardly, the new Ram's forward-angled grille juts out as before, like an overbite, and fronts the same cab and box sizes. However, the nose is now 2.5 centimetres higher, the headlights are updated and the grille can be specified with fuel-saving shutters that automatically close at highway speeds.

Base price: $21,700

2 Toyota Tundra
Base price: $27,800

3 Chevrolet Silverado

Review. Modifications say Ram is taking its future seriously

MALCOLM GUNN
Wheelbase Media

The changes were really a long-time coming.

The 2013 Ram 1500 arrives with enough new content engineered into its soul to gain plenty of traction with the tough pickup crowd. Whether it's enough to entice Ford and General Motors supporters to join the Ram flock remains to be seen, but as the nation's economic health remains relatively strong, so should the fortunes of all light and medium-duty truck brands.

Now operating as its own unit apart from Chrysler's Dodge division, the Ram brand — specifically the 1500 series — receives some critical mid-product-cycle adjustments that are significant on a number of fronts. Carrying over, and exclusive to the job-site Tradesmen model, is a 310-horsepower 4.7-litre V8 connected to a six-speed automatic transmission.

Rams fitted with the eight-speed come with a rotary shift dial on the lower left corner of the centre stack, replacing the previous column or console-mounted shifter. The interior also features an available touch-screen access for communications and audio devices and Wi-Fi Internet access.

Further changes to the Ram involve adopting a stiffened frame that's also lighter by about 14 kilograms. Alone that's not much, but combined with a lighter base powertrain and front suspension and the combined savings reaches the 60-kilogram range.

The Ram also becomes the first in its class to offer key-fob-controlled air suspension on Quad and Crew models that features five ride height settings. In addition, the Ram makes giant strides in areas that matter most while actually improving power and towing capacity, things that make people want to buy trucks in the first place.

Ford uses balls to see how much large compartments can hold. BOTH PHOTOS HANDOUT

Ping-pong precision: Ford gets ball rolling

Measuring space. Company believes table tennis spheres give them edge in sizing compartments

JIL MCINTOSH
Drive@metronews.ca

You may think of ping-pong balls as being strictly for games. But at Ford, the company has found a new use for them: As measuring devices in storage compartments.

"A few years ago, we were trying to come up with a good way to measure some of our vehicles," says Sejal Shreffler, Ford Accommodation and Usage Engineer, based in Dearborn, Michigan. "We were brainstorming to come up with alternatives, and someone suggested ping-pong balls, so we tried it. It was a good way to measure some of the odd-shaped storage in vehicles."

The company was using measuring tapes, taking the length and width to figure out volume, but many storage compartments have odd shapes. As a result, two people could measure the same compartment but come up with different numbers.

To use the ping-pong balls, the engineers developed a cubic measurement for each ball that also accounted for the space in between them. By using this measurement over the number of ping-pong balls that fit into a storage compartment, they come up with an accurate total volume of the area.

"We've done some work in measuring it in 3D environments and using the ping-pong balls, we're able to get really accurate results," Shreffler says. "We do measure our own vehicles, but primarily, we put them in competitors' vehicles to get an understanding of how big some of their storage compartments are, so we can do better benchmarking."

For smaller storage spaces, the company uses computer-aided design (CAD), or even a measuring tape, but the ping-pong balls have proven to be one of the easiest and most accurate methods for larger ones.

Storage compartments are very important to buyers, and like most companies, Ford identifies the top items that people bring into the vehicle and design the vehicle's console and other storage areas so they will be handy for the driver.

"Cell phones are the big thing," Shreffler says. "When I first started here, we never considered anything like that, but now everyone has some sort of cell phone or smart phone. Now there are a lot of electronic devices that we didn't consider before, but we have to now, such as iPads."

Other areas

- Gulp. As cup sizes increase, so do cupholder sizes, although Ford admits that "there is a limit" on the largest sizes that can be accommodated.
- Lighting up. Although they're not found in Canadian vehicles anymore, the company still designs ashtrays into its vehicles for some global markets.

The balls give the company a more accurate reading than anything else.

Take charge! The future's electric

AUTO PILOT

drive@metronews.ca

Car owners have a love-hate thing going on with gas stations. We don't like giving them money, but when we need them, we need them bad. When we need them bad, only they can satisfy our feverish desire for lovely amber transportation fluid, tasty snacks, and semi-clean washrooms.

The age of public charging stations is upon us. With the continuing electrification of the automobile, gas stations are no longer the only "refueling" game in town. EVs (full electric vehicles) and PHEVs (plug in hybrids) can snub their aerodynamic noses at gas stations.

EVs and PHEVs mostly get charged at home, during the night. But electric car stakeholders are working toward a world where public charging stations will augment at-home charging, to facilitate more electric car adoption, and to expand their respective daily ranges.

Chris Hill is president of Electric Mobility Canada, an association that includes virtually all those stakeholders — EV and PHEV manufacturers, provincial power utilities, battery and charging station companies, etc. Hill says there are currently about 200 public charging stations in Canada, most of which are located in Quebec.

Quebec and B.C. are leading the charge (pun not initially intended). "The Electric Circuit" is an initiative of the Hydro Quebec and is billed as the country's first public charging network. The 150 proposed stations would be located on the premises of partners, such as St-Hubert (the chicken chain), the cities of Montreal and Quebec, Rona, Metro (the grocery chain), Discount Car and Truck Rentals and AMT, which runs the province's commuter train services. Would-be chargers just buy the special $25 user card from Hydro Quebec, good for 10 charges, and away they go…

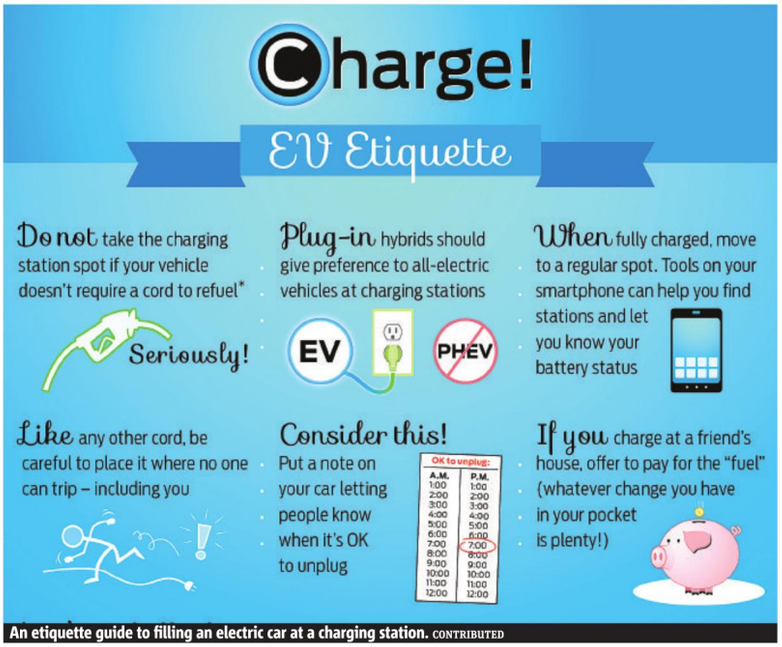
AddEnergie, a Quebec-based charging station builder, will further boost the province's public charging infrastructure, with a proposed 80-station network. But Quebec will eventually be eclipsed by B.C. Through the province's Clean Vehicle Initiative and Vancouver's goal to be the greenest city in the world by 2020, there will be lots of public stations going up soon in the province. Hill expects about 700 to be built there next year.

Public charging stations are a province-by-province thing, because electricity is a provincially regulated function. Hill adds that currently only provincially-regulated entities can "resell" electricity — hence their need to work with partners and vice-versa.

When corporate and municipal partners get involved, it's more often about promoting a green image and/or delivering a desirable customer service, because they're not the ones making the electricity or billing you for it.

A case in the point is the lone public charging station currently in Toronto. It's located close to City Hall in a visible spot in the Sheraton Centre, and the hotel doesn't charge you for the juice.

Where all the public charging stations should go is still up for discussion. Not up for discussion is the fact that they are definitely coming to Canada — maybe not as fast as they are populating in the U.S.



Charge!
EV Etiquette
Do not take the charging station spot if your vehicle doesn't require a cord to refuel*
Seriously!
Plug-in hybrids should give preference to all-electric vehicles at charging stations
EV
PHEV
When fully charged, move to a regular spot. Tools on your smartphone can help you find stations and let you know your battery status
Like any other cord, be careful to place it where no one can trip – including you Consider this!
Put a note on your car letting people know when it's OK to unplug

(where they already have 4,000 and counting), but they're definitely coming. And developing along with them will be a totally new refueling culture, and one not based on the petroleum model.

Ford of Canada is already on the case. They published an info-graphic recently on EV charging etiquette. They want to make sure courtesy and common sense gets a fair shake at the public charging station, and we're all for that.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
You may want to give up on something that does not seem to be working out, but don't be too hasty. A few days from now, you will get an idea as to how you can further develop it. Stick with it.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Something seems to be holding you back from fully expressing yourself. Whatever that something is, you need to identify it and deal with it because your voice is going to be needed towards the end of the week.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
The more others try to tell you there is nothing to worry about, the more the alarm bells in your head start to ring. Are you being overly dramatic? No you are not. Be on your guard over the next 24 hours.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
You may find this hard to believe but what happens today will sweep away your fears and before you know it, the world will be a brighter, happier place — for you at least. This is still very much your time of year.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
By all means, listen to what other people try to tell you today. But when it comes to acting on what they say, you must be cautious. There is a small but worrying possibility that you are being lied to.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
There is no point giving into feelings of self-pity because they won't get you anywhere. A positive mental attitude is a must today, and for the rest of the week. You won't get much done without it.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
It may now be apparent that someone who acts like a friend is in fact plotting against you but there is no need to get excited about it. What have they so far achieved? Nothing. And that's how it will stay.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
It is too late to change the outcome of a certain situation, and the sooner you realize that, the better. Don't waste time and energy trying to reverse what has already happened. Unless you own a time machine, it won't work.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
You may be able to see where a friend or family member is going wrong but it's unlikely they will be happy if you point it out to them. Do so anyway, so your conscience is clear. After that, it's up to them.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You may have to make some kind of sacrifice today but if you do so willingly, it is guaranteed that you will gain in other ways before the end of the week. Don't forget: A good heart is also good business.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
It may seem as if nothing is going right but don't let it get to you. Take each moment as it comes and focus on one task at a time. You'll get at least one good thing done by the end of the day.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
You would no doubt admit that you have gone along with other people's suggestions a bit too much in recent weeks. Now you must resolve only to do what feels right to you. It's your life after all.
